

Help Shape the Future of Conservation in Wood County

Complete the survey today!
Open through mid-September

What conservation issues matter most to you? Whether you're a farmer, landowner, business owner, or resident, your input can help shape the future of conservation in Wood County.

Wood Soil & Water Conservation District (Wood SWCD) is asking residents to complete a countywide conservation survey as part of the development of its watershed planning efforts. The survey is funded through the Ohio Lake Erie Commission, these projects will help identify local priorities, guide future conservation programs, and position Wood County for state and federal funding opportunities.

The survey asks participants to share their thoughts on topics such as:

- Water quality
- Drainage and flooding
- Farmland preservation
- Wildlife habitat
- Recreational opportunities
- Natural resource concerns facing Wood County

Survey responses will help Wood SWCD better understand the needs and priorities of our community, ensuring that future conservation efforts are driven by local input.

The survey is open through mid-September, and all Wood County residents are encouraged to participate. It only takes a few minutes to complete, but your feedback will help guide conservation priorities for years to come.
